In Dialogue -- Talking with Children About Current Events: Starting Conversations About Racism, Violence, and Justice

Facilitated Webinars to be held June 25 & 26

- Who: Louisiana Children's Museum & Tulane Institute of Infant and Early Childhood Mental Health
- What: In Dialogue Webinars – Talking with Children About Current Events: Starting Conversations About Racism, Violence, and Justice
- When: Thursday, June 25; 1:30 pm – 3pm (for Spanish speaking parents and caregivers)
Facilitated by Elizabeth Allain, Ph.D., Tulane University School of Medicine, Division of Child & Adolescent Psychiatry
- Friday, June 26; 3pm – 4:30pm (for African American parents and caregivers)
Facilitated by Dr. Angela Keyes, Tulane School of Medicine, and Candice Lobban, LCM Visitor Services Manager
- Where: Zoom Link <https://bit.ly/30WX2TV>
- Why: There is an overwhelming amount of information coming at us as we reflect on actively dismantling the generations of structural racism in our country. As parents, how can we talk to our children about current events, such as why people are protesting and the violent incidents of racism? How can we care for their emotional well-being?
- Facilitators will share talking points parents and caregivers can use to talk with young children about current events.
- The Louisiana Children's Museum encourages meaningful dialogue that promotes talking, listening, hearing, learning, and understanding. The LCM's In Dialogue series of webinars presented by the Tulane Institute of Infant and Early Childhood Development is designed to address topics around mental health and the challenges of parenting in the face of COVID-19 and the movement for equity and justice.
- Past In Dialogue sessions are available, here on the LCM YouTube channel (lchildrensmuseum).*
